NYGH Publications

Peer-reviewed publications from PubMed or Web of Science with authors from NYGH

Last updated by Michael Wood on March 14, 2024

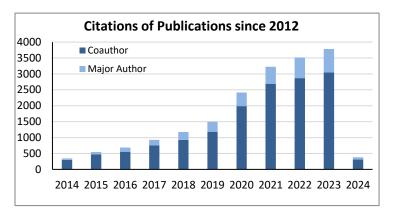

The chart on the right and table below show the number of peer-reviewed articles indexed by PubMed or Web of Science with an author from NYGH. In scope are original research, reviews, editorials, letters, and guidelines, but not books, chapters, abstracts, or conference presentations. Two different categories of authorship role are presented. Some early access papers in the current year will move to the next year. Since 2014, the number of publications per year has tripled.

Peer-Reviewed Publications from NYGH

Citations of peer-reviewed articles indexed by Web of Science with a coauthor or major author (principal, senior, etc.) from NYGH. The number of citations in any year encompasses publications from 2012 to that year. The most highly cited publication shows the extent to which one publication influences the composite tally. Since 2014, the number of citations has increased 10-fold.

Number of NYGH members in four groups with at least one peer-reviewed publication indexed by PubMed or Web of Science. Counted are original research, reviews, editorials, letters, and guidelines. Since 2014, the number of physicians with at least one publication has doubled.

Number of peer-reviewed publications (original research, reviews, editorials, letters, and guidelines) indexed by PubMed or Web of Science from four NYGH groups. The tally across groups equals the number of publications, the count for a major author is assigned entirely to the group or divided among multiple applicable groups. If there is no major author, the count is allocated according to the number of coauthors from each group. Note the steady increase for most groups.

Citations of peer-reviewed publications indexed by Web of Science with an NYGH author. The number of citations in any year encompasses publications from 2012 to that year. If there are authors from multiple groups, the citations are allocated to groups the same way as the number of papers. Note the sharp increase for each group.

*Publications year to date.

Number of peer-reviewed publications indexed by PubMed or Web of Science with a major author (first, last, etc.) from one of four NYGH groups. Counted are original research, reviews, editorials, letters, and guidelines. When there are major authors from multiple groups, the count is split (eg. 0.5 each for two groups) so that the total matches the number for the entire organization. The 5 Research Chairs account for 40% of the productivity.

Notes:

- Only articles and editorials are counted -- no proceedings, abstracts, corrections, or papers in-press.
- Typically, there is a delay before a publication is indexed in PubMed or Web of Science.
- In the case of publication year discrepancy (early access, PubMed vs Web of Science), the later date is used.
- The paper count in the current year is inflated, because some early access papers will move to the next year.
